shared within a chat, the Detector feature automatically blurs the image and alerts the receiver that they have been sent an inappropriate image.

The person receiving the image can then decide whether or not to view the image or block it. They can easily report it to the moderation team too.

Andrey Andreev (founder of Badoo) and Whitney Wolfe Herd (founder and CEO of Bumble) (Badoo)

From June 2019, all users of Badoo, Bumble, Chappy and Lumen will have the feature seamlessly integrated into the app.

Andreev said in a statement: "The safety of our users is without question the number one priority in everything we do and the development of "Private Detector" is another undeniable example of that commitment. The sharing of lewd images is a global issue of critical importance and it falls upon all of us in the social media and social networking worlds to lead by example and to refuse to
