Veer Pratap Singh (Jimmy Shergill) has always lived in fear since childhood due to traumatic experiences which he witnessed when he was young. He also had a brother, Raghu Singh (Mithun Chakraborty), who was the only thing in the world Veer Pratap loved. But when Veer Pratap passed away at a young age, Raghu deserted his family and no one could find him. Veer Pratap's son, Rohan (Ajay Devgn), went to college and did well in his studies but chose not to pursue a career in law like his father and chose to follow his own path. He joined the army and stayed there for many years before returning home and opening up a Punjabi Baghlani (a kind of fast food) franchise which failed miserably. Rohan then met a Punjabi girl named Kiran (Shraddha Kapoor) and his life started changing for the better. The two fell in love, had a beautiful daughter and were happy. But when Kiran was diagnosed with cancer, Rohan started thinking of the past and trying to find answers for things he hadn't asked or been told about when he was younger. On one of his many quests to find answers to questions that plague him, Rohan happens to meet a man who claims that he is Raghu Singh and knows everything there is to know about Veer Pratap. He leads Rohan into a whole new world of answers that no one else could ever give him.
